

their husbands died before them. These women later kept this holy resolution and persevered in it despite their youth and despite the other very strong reasons which seemingly obliged them, for their own benefit and that of their children, to marry again, which they could easily have done since they were sought by very advantageous suitors. Such were the great fruits which the life and death of Kateri produced at the Mission of the Sault and which her memory, so dearly kept here, continues to produce every day...”

“It was not possible to cover her face, as they all took pleasure in gazing at it.”

N.B. This chapter was reprinted from Father Henri Bécharde’s book “Kaiatanoron” available for purchase in the center section.

Special

Many items are reduced in price in our catalogue. Look for the above logo in the central section.